"Existing laws make it difficult for news publishers – especially small, local and regional publishers – to obtain fair compensation from the platforms for the use of their content.... The JCPA would help address these problems by allowing publishers such as us to come together to negotiate with the platforms for the compensation they deserve."

"It would allow for the development of a pro-competitive, business-led solution that will help the Los Angeles Times and San Diego Union-Tribune earn their fair share of subscription and advertising dollars for their original content – and preserve and create jobs for the people who produce it."

"It is more important than ever to protect quality journalism that is independent both from government and from powerful Silicon Valley companies. We urge you to support the Journalism Competition and Preservation Act."

"The platforms rely on quality publishers to fill their feeds and search results to provide factual information and to stop the spread of dis- and misinformation. To ensure a fair playing field, The Lenfest Institute for Journalism believes news publishers should be able to negotiate fairly with companies that depend on their journalism."

THE LENFEST INSTITUTE

"The bill would protect pro-competitive solutions that would allow subscription and advertising dollars to properly flow back to publishers and help protect quality journalism and a healthy democracy."
